Integrated energy production systems based on the renewable or fossil energy sources for poly-generation applications are inevitable in the near future for both environmental and sustainability concerns. Increasing the overall efficiency by combining system decreases the energy consumption and increases the system outputs such as electricity, heat, hot water, cooling, hydrogen, oxygen, and ext. Considering the global energy demands, the increase of efficiency of polygeneration systems will decrease ...