With developing technology, computer applications are used in all areas of life from the ethernet to desktop applications and mobile devices. These applications work on different platforms. Therefore, when an application is developed, it is necessary that applications must be re-coded for different devices. In this study, Turkish Chameleon programming language, which produces output for desktop applications and different mobile platforms (Android and iOS) has been developed.